TRAINING

Peter Nowlan

Peter is an international business coach working with leaders and teams who want to increase their performance. He has delivered training all over the world to leaders who want to challenge their traditional views of leadership. With a background in the media industry he is outstanding at provoking new and creative ways of thinking.

Experience

He has over 30 years experience as a leader, a consultant and a coach and has held budget responsibility for many businesses - this included managing an annual marketing spend of £20m. In the 1980s he built up a film and video production company which was sold later to the Virgin Group. In the 1990s he worked for a series of large clients as a marketing consultant, which led to two years as a Group Marketing Director for Granada Group plc (now ITV plc).

Since 2000 he has worked as a coach and run leadership, team performance and change programmes for boards and business teams in many sectors and countries. He has worked with large private and public sector clients, professional firms and SMEs in the UK, and in the last three years a growing list of clients in the Middle East. In 2006 he was appointed me as interim COO of a global property development operation.
