TRAINER PROFILE: CHRIS ATKINSON

Chris is an inspiring business professional who combines strong commercial and training experience. He is an international trainer and speaker specialising in engagement, organisational culture and inspiring leadership. Starting his training career in 2001 Chris has worked with senior executives and diverse businesses throughout the UK, Europe, Asia and the Middle East.

His specific skill lies with designing and delivering robust, engaging training and developing senior leadership to enhance business focus, performance and strategic direction. Chris has been featured on the front cover of Realizing Leadership Magazine speaking about Transformational Leadership.

EXPERIENCED IN...

Executive Team Development - Chris has experience in working with senior executives across Europe, Asia and the Middle East. He is particularly skilled at supporting executive teams through the development of strategic business planning, vision and organisation cultural change. With the clarity and confidence to deliver difficult messages and identify ineffective working practices Chris is able to work with a client in partnership and achieve behavioural change.

Trainer & Programme Development - Chris's strength in training delivery has provided him with a strong understanding of how to connect with an audience, deliver consistent messages and provide high quality engaging learning opportunities. His knowledge and skill in this area has led to the development of all Elysian programmes. A particular passion of his is trainer development and this has led to the highly successful Corporate Energy (Train the Trainer) programme.
